Where Were You in '91 and '92

It was a year we were forgetting about a war that barely was,
A year we stopped being patriots because no one else was.

It was a year we stopped to listen
as a woman addressed us all,
About the evils of sexual harrassment while making a mockery of the law.

It was a year we kept on fighting against a disease whose end is tragic,
It preys on all, it knows no foe,
Neither medical or magic.

It was a year we kept on trying to learn and pay the rent,
The country's broke, healthcare's a mess
the time in school was heaven sent.

This book is dedicated to my reason for being: my little girl.

She is the reason I'm in college; her future depends on my success.

Within twenty months of life, she has mastered qualities which I can only hope to achieve; but through trying have helped me complete this task. Qualities such as complete trust (which I am convinced I can not afford), constant inquisitiveness (which I am afraid to exhibit for fear of being viewed the fool), and unconditional love (which I too often put aside in favor of my own interests).

What she learns from me I hope is good; what I learn from her I know is good.

What is it?

Where did we put it?

The campus cat is always there, lurking... waiting...

A large portion of a student's life is spent in the classroom, and studying for time spent in the classroom. Yet this aspect is not the only part of a student's life worth examining. In our student life section this year, we have tried not only to show different students engaging in various activities on campus, but also to highlight some students who, in one way or another, are special. Space limitations keep us from highlighting the overwhelming number of students we could have highlighted; we can only hope we have chosen a good cross section to represent the school.

Wife, Worker, Mother, Student

Kim Jones is a part time student at Armstrong, taking seven to ten hours per quarter. She is also a mother and a wife. To keep her family going, she also works full time as Assistant Manager at "The Print Shop" on Mall boulevard. Her schedule, to say the least, is hectic. Trying to keep up with her while shooting this photo essay proved impossible, so we put together some photos that were shot over a week or two. Even so, what you see on these two pages represents an average day in Kim's life. More power to her.

First, it's up in the morning at 5:30 sharp...

makes it in time for her 7:00am class...

and after class, she's at work by 8:00.

Usually she's home by 8:30, and the family has dinner.

After a little quality time, the baby's put to bed...

then dress the baby...

with kisses and hugs, she drops the baby at daycare...

After work, she picks up the baby...

and then either studies or, on Thursdays goes to class at 6:00pm while her husband babysits.

How it's done

The only real problem I have with my schedule is trying to fit in enough sleep. It always seems that more time than I think goes by when I'm playing with my daughter Sarah, then I find myself up late studying for classes. It's not an unusual event to be 2 to 5 minutes late for Political Science at 7:00 AM in the morning. But, all in all, I think the effort is worth it. If only I could get my husband to change a dirty diaper without making such gross faces it makes the baby cry!

and she does the same. Tommorrow's a busy day.

Ugandan, Class President, Student

Joseph Babula's application for acceptance was just another piece of paper in a stack of applications when he first applied at Armstrong. If Joseph wasn't quite sure was he was getting in Armstrong, it's a fair bet that Armstrong State College had no idea what it was getting in Joseph. In short order, Joseph was in class and learning the ropes around campus that would eventually help him travel the road to the top. This was his senior year, and he plans on moving along to graduate school. Whatever school he ends up at next, look out!

One of the benefits of the President

How it's done

Thank God for my dad. My coming to Armstrong was my dad's idea. My experiences here have made me realize what a good choice he made for me. I have made many friends, had fun, and even studied occasionally. One problem which hit me hardest upon my arrival in the U.S. still exists though: how someone can hate another because of the color of their skin. I think it's a shame. Finally, thanks to all those who helped me live out my dream; I hope I have given you back half as much as you have given me. Thanks to my family, especially my late dad - I know he can hear me.

Homecoming Week

Steve Young meets Ronnie Romm

This Homecoming event was so hysterical we decided to devote a couple of pages to it. No one in the packed cafeteria had any idea how entertaining the combination Steve Young and Ronnie Romm was going to be. Out of the twelve people who were on stage being hypnotised, it was Steve, and the things he did upon the suggestions of Mentalist/Hypnotist Ronnie Romm that absolutely floored the audience with laughter. When Ronnie asked everyone to relax, Steve definitely complied. As the show progressed, Steve wholeheartedly participated in everything from reeling in an imaginary fish, shouting his horse to victory at an imaginary track, hiding his winning ticket in his shorts, then quickly extracting it because suddenly it was a piece of imaginary ice. The highlight of the show was Steve jumping across stage, convinced he had recieved a slight shock on the butt whenever Ronnie stomped his foot, and Steve was convinced it was all his best friends' fault. We talked with Steve afterward, and he said he remembered hardly anything; he felt a little dizzy, but mostly rested, like he had been sleeping soundly. He also mentioned the fact that for the rest of the day, everyone was sneaking up behind him and stomping their foot!

Homecoming Week, (con't)

Homecoming Week was full of activities designed to involve students in school spirit. Baseball player Pete Richter showed his spirit by stuffing his face to victory in the eating contest. Student artists turned out to try their hand in the chalk-in contest, and different student organizations showed their spirit in the banner contest. A large number of students showed up for the lip sync contest, resulting in loud laughs and some exchanging of glances. Few stayed for the Roommate Game, but those who did were not disappointed. Perhaps the most humorous memory of Homecoming Week was mentalist/hypnotist Ronnie Romm's visit to our campus, coupled with the delirious antics of his subject/victim Steve Young (see previous pages). Homecoming Night itself gave way to a large Armstrong Pirates victory over the Lander Senators in both the men and women's games. The Homecoming Queen title went to Angie Collins, one girl out of an impressive bunch of candidates. Overall, Homecoming Week was a big success, and was especially rewarding to those who participated.

Student Worker, CUB Member, Student

June Viruet, in her second year at Armstrong, is majoring in Nursing. From the time she arrived at school, she became very involved in many activities. From working in the Student Activities Office to being a member of the College Union Board, June has become a well known figure to many people around campus.

How it's done

Trying to balance College Union Board responsibilities along with school and family has not been easy, but it has definitely had its rewards. The best thing about CUB was being involved in choosing the entertainment to come to campus, then seeing the students enjoy the activities when they arrive. The Homecoming Week activities were especially challenging and rewarding. I look forward to becoming a Registered Nurse and being able to help others in their time of need. The hard work and studying was worth it.

Policeman, Karate Instructor, Student

Gary Glemboski, a dedicated policeman, part-time student, karate instructor, and Criminal Justice major. With Gary's busy schedule, he still finds time to teach karate to his fellow policeman and the children of the community. For this layout, June Viruet, a Geechee staff member, went along for a ride during one of his nights on duty as a Savannah Police Officer. With all the excitement she relayed to her friends in the following weeks, it seems a sure thing that his job is never boring.

How it's done

I feel very fortunate that the vocation I have chosen, law enforcement, is the one that I truly enjoyed for the past ten years. It is also fortunate that my major diversion, martial arts, relates to my job. The Criminal Justice program which I have chosen here at Armstrong is also a major aspect of what I do on the job.

Even though I waited a long time to return to school, I feel that I made the right choice. In waiting I feel that I gained valuable experience and maturity that are essential in understanding education at a college level.

Being at Armstrong has given me a chance to be involved with the educational process at a very important time in people's lives. In classes where I interject some of my personal experiences I feel I have contributed to individual's understanding of the subject. After my law enforcement career is over, I would like to teach at the college level.

When I first started at Armstrong, I felt that I was starting a whole new facet of my life. Now that I am about to graduate I have that same feeling again. I know that I will not only continue education, but keep adding these additional facets through my career and other interests.

Student Senator, Phi Mu President, Chaos Leader, Student

Tonja Moore, a junior, is a Physical Education major. To Tonja, one of the most important factors in enjoying her college career is getting involved. She balances her hectic schedule around the student Senate, Chaos, school work, her job at Calvary, and, of course, Phi Mu. If you don't know Tonja, you're missing someone special.

How it's done

Trying to balance my senate responsibilities, Phi Mu, school, work, (and everything else) is quite a chore, but I find it all very rewarding. Armstrong has so much to offer, yet only a handful of students take advantage of all of the extracurricular activities. Take for instance the Greek Life on campus. Less than 75 students are members in fraternities or sororities on campus. Students at ASC don't understand that being involved in a Greek organization is a positive thing, and can lead to long term friendships. I have one bit of advice for students. Be involved, you won't regret it!

Kimberly and Angelisa have a lot to cry and smile about.

After much preparation, the 1992 Miss Armstrong State College contestants can finally breathe easily. The 1992 Miss Armstrong State College Pageant took place on January 24th in the Fine Arts Auditorium. Participating in the pageant were Jennifer Kelly, Erin Bauman, Dionne Lewis, Shannon Wilson, Laura Miller, Kimberly Whitfield, Cherry Hooks, and Angelisa Savage. These girls displayed their singing and dancing talents for a fairly large audience. The second runner-up was Shannon Wilson, with first runner-up going to Kimberly Whitfield. But it was Angelisa Savage who came out on top, and we wish her luck in the upcoming (at this writing) Miss Georgia Pageant. All in all, it was a great night, and if you missed it, you missed a lot. Make your plans now to be there next year.

We could play some ball!

From basketball to tennis, from baseball to cheerleading, we were a force to be reckoned with in the college athletic circuit. Just the mention of Armstrong brought fear into the hearts of our tennis opponents. The basketball team had a few off the court problems, but on the court they were awesome. The cheerleaders were 7th in the nation. The baseball team made it to the playoffs. From volleyball to cross country, the dance team all the way down to intramurals, we could play some ball!

Helping Us Get Through It!

Whether we paid for dues, services, or merchandise, these groups and services helped us all get through the school year.

From the five dollar dues for a club membership, to a thousand or so dollars for a used textbook, we parted with our money to keep our education going. The fellowship is what kept us going most, though. It was a comforting thought to know that each one of us was not alone in our suffering and successes.

1991-92 Inkwell Staff Voted Best Ever

"We Own This Place," Says Editor, "YOU CAN'T TOUCH THIS!!!"

BY CHRIS FOSTER

QUESTION:

What job offers as its perks the following: long nights, little pay, and little or no recognition?

No, it's not the ASC President's job. It is a position on the hardest working little newspaper on campus. The Inkwell is written, edited, and managed by the students of ASC, something you don't see at other schools. The Editor for the 1991-92 was Chris Foster. Together with his trusty assistant editors, Christopher "I Love the Registrar's Office" Whitfield and Sandra "I'm doin' it, I'm doin' it" Vinueza, produced the bi-weekly newspaper whose goal was to inform the students of what the hell was going on around here.

With a trusty staff of ten or so writers, The Inkwell delved into such hot topics as discrimination on campus, the best of Armstrong, and many other events that are just too numerous to mention.

Foster felt that the newspaper was a rousing success:

Things Happen... Usually

For the most part, all the student activities that were planned for the '91-'92 school year actually happened.

Some events, like the Beach Bash, were relatively successful; some however, were dismal failures, such as The Rhythm Corp concert. Some things went as usual, and some things didn't happen at all. No matter what, we were there, even if it was cancelled!

PEOPLE & EVENTS

Alcohol Awareness

Remember the previous year when there were wrecked cars on the front lawn of the school? Remember this year when we put all that energy into Alcohol Awareness Week when we... humm... you know, we... remember... didn't we...

And now for something completely different.

Alcohol Awareness

Now hold on just a minute! I know we had something planned. Let me think.
..... (thinking) ..... Oh yea! We had a Mocktail Party! You know, alternative drinks! Yea, we set up... No, wait, that was last year!

And now for something completely different.

And that, my friend, is why you are waiting tables, and a star like myself will never do more than one show a night.

ASC Birthday Party

Comedian Erik Kornfield gives the sign that he is OooKaay; no stray broccoli or bullets have hit him yet!

OK, this event happened. Barely.

Comedian Erik Kornfield played to the lunch crowd inside the cafeteria. It was not a pretty sight as he was unable to capture the attention of a crowd forcing down a bunch of food they payed too much for in the first place.

He boldly continued his failing performance through the clanking of dishes and the inattention of the crowd, and made what must have been record time for a comedian arriving and departing the campus. By the by, the College Union Board paid a handsome sum of money to this guy for his appearance.

On a good note, the cake was good. And free, too!

Tonja Moore and Reneé Hutson gave out the cake and juice. This part of the celebration was rather successful.

Faculty Appreciation

Hey, we know the ASC Birthday Party is given two pages in the table of contents, but seeings how it was such a raging success that inspired such an abundance of great prose and beautiful pictures, we strangely enough found ourselves with an extra page.

The Faculty Appreciation Cookout, held at the end of the school year, was, in contrast, a success. This event was sponsored by the Student Government Association, and all faculty was invited to come have a dinner cooked up by the students.

On the menu were items such as hamburgers, hot dogs, baked beans, macaroni salad, potato (that's without an "e" on the end, Mr. Vice-President) chips, and brownies.

The turnout was pretty good, and all those involved seemed to have a good time.

There were also plenty of brownies left over. Suffice it to say that not one of the left over brownies made it to a trash can. (Burp... excuse me.)

Russell Jones and James McGraw try to cook the faculty's food faster than Joseph Babula and Tonja Moore can eat it.

Kelly Swain, Stacy Ware & Renee Hutson serve faculty member... Tonja Moore? Hey, wait a minute!

Beach Bash III-D

Hurry Reneé, Hurry!

Once again, the students of Armstrong State College descended upon Spanky's Beachside on Tybee Island for the annual Beach Bash! Once again, it was a smashing good time!

The first hundred or so students got free hats, t-shirts, and, more importantly, food. Around 12:30, the games began. From racing while wearing flippers and a plastic duck to playing tug-of-war, everyone had a good time.

It's a safe bet a lot of people will be back next year.

This was the crime scene

Kinda' makes you hope she won, doesn't it?

Duane Georges rode his bike all the way there and back!

That guy in the back worked hard all year to attain that cigarette smokin', brewskie drinkin', buffed beachcomer look for the summer.

CHAOS

Communication, Help, Advisement, Orientation & Service

Each year, just before the start of fall quarter, a bunch of students get together to plan out a way to make the incoming Freshmen, and all the new students, feel comfortable about coming to Armstrong. This group of students, with the help of Student Affairs Directors Dr. Buck and Dr. Kelso, along with Student Activities Director All Harris, puts together a campus tour package that acquaints incoming students with the college, gets them pre-registered, shows them where their classes are, makes them aware of the many offerings on campus, and then ends the day by entertaining them with comedy skits that say something useful about Armstrong. The CHAOS program has always been a huge success. The students who participate are to be commended.

Faculty Lecture Series

The Faculty Lecture Series provides a forum for Armstrong State College's teachers to report on original research, to investigate subjects of special interest and to present classroom lecture topics that deserve a wider audience. The series also offers an opportunity for members of the local community to discover and share the assets of the college that lie beyond the classroom.

The Quaint and Curious Persian Gulf War

Dennis Murphy, Department of Government

Though the Persian Gulf War ranked high in newsworthiness, it directly touched few American lives. The indirect effects, however, are of great moment. This talk will examine the reasons the war was fought, the way it was fought, and the long-term consequences of its nebulous conclusion.

The Resurrection of Frankenstein

Lorie Roth, Department of Languages, Literature, and Dramatic Arts

Like the monster resurrected in countless Frankenstein movies, so too the novel on which the Frankenstein stories are based has lately been reanimated. Originally written 175 years ago by an eighteen-year-old pregnant unmarried woman, the book Frankenstein died quickly and was buried by the literary establishment for over 160 years. This lecture will discuss the premature burial and the renewed life of Mary Wollstonecraft Shelley's novel Frankenstein.

Oxygen and Oxidation

Cedric Stratton, Department of Chemistry and Physics

Nobel Laureate Linus Pauling studied chemical bonds, using accurate caloric information on heat generated in different reactions. He devised a formula which developed a single number for each element (called electronegativity) which he used as a predictor for a wide variety of chemical phenomena. This lecture/demonstration will present several rapid and spectacular oxidations, with comments. Positively no mathematics needed.

Ecology of Salt Marshes

Kenneth Relyea, Department of Biology

The Atlantic Coast of the United States, and especially Georgia, has extensive salt marsh estuarine ecosystems. These salt marshes are extremely productive of living matter and are a link between terrestrial and marine ecosystems. This presentation will explore the importance and ecology of salt marshes.

Wage Craft and the Measure of Man in Plato's Republic

Tom Cooksey, Department of Languages, Literature, and Dramatic Arts

All people seek their own advantage, says Thrasymachus the Sophist. To counter this, Socrates introduces the distinction between the craft itself (techné) and the parallel craft of wages (misthoutikos techné). The latter seeks its own advantage to support and maintain the practice of the former. What seems a facile ploy is in fact crucial to Socrates' conception of justice, opening an ethical space that explores what it means to be a human being.

The United States Economy and Global Competitiveness

Yassaman Saadatmand and John Kearnes, Department of Government

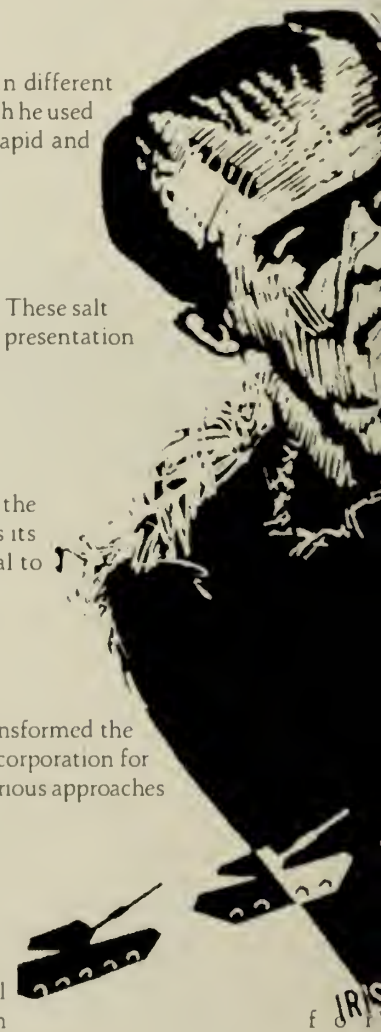

The rise of Japan, the economic integration of Europe, and the deindustrialization of the United States have transformed the American economy. Almost every day a U.S. company is forced to trade its leading-edge technology to a foreign corporation for cash to stay alive. At issue is how the United States will face this global competition. The lecture will survey the various approaches which have been suggested to help the United States maintain its position in the global market place.

The Fifth Annual Sebastian Dangerfield St. Patrick's Week Lecture and Irish Coffee Reception

Frank Clancy, Department of Languages, Literature, and Dramatic Arts

Presented in honor of Sebastian Dangerfield, the saintly hero of Donleavy's The Ginger Man, this lecture will resurrect a twentieth century Irish writer. Again this year the talk will be followed by an Irish coffee reception those who continue to resist the temptations of the flesh and to praise the life of the unspotted spirit.

Issachar Jacox Roberts: A Missionary Maverick in China

George Pruden, Department of History

The Rev. Mr. Roberts (1802-71) served as a Baptist missionary to China from 1837 to 1867, a period of dramatic changes in China's relationship with western powers. Roberts was from Tennessee, the American frontier at that time, and he exemplified the independent spirit of his background. He was one of the pioneers in American Protestant missions to China, and his checkered career reflected cultural tensions within the United States as well as in its relations with China.

Heavy Metal: Toxic Metal Poisoning in Fact and Fiction

James Byrd, Department of Chemistry and Physics

Since antiquity, toxic metals and metalloids have been tools of the trade of poisoners in both life and literature. These substances (e.g., arsenic and mercury) also have many household and industrial uses that can lead to accidental exposure resulting in sickness or death. From the Mad Hatter to Minamata, from Emma Bovary to Velma Barfield, examples of intentional and unintentional poisonings from history and literature will be examined to determine which is stranger, truth or fiction.

The Politics of American Literature

Carol Andrews, Department of Languages, Literature, and Dramatic Arts

During the sixties and seventies, as a result of the Civil Rights and feminist movements, American literary scholars began to rediscover writers previously lost, forgotten, or suppressed. Although this movement has made important contributions to our understanding of American experience, recent campus disputes have raised the question of whether such a movement can go too far. This talk will attempt to determine whether "political correctness" furthers or subverts the aims of literary criticism.

All lectures are presented on Thursdays at 12 noon in the ASC Health Professions Auditorium. Public invited.

Special Thanks to Micki Lee

Carrot Top!

After the performance:
Rom e Edenfeld, June
Viruet, Carrot Top &
Stella Serpa

Early in the performance.

In contrast to the comedian that played the college's birthday party, this guy was funny!

Carrot Top help the lunch crowd in the cafeteria spell-bound in stitches as he showed off boxes full of ridiculous inventions. From a dog already attached to a frishbee to a oversized ball and chain, he kept the audience laughing for over an hour.

He wrapped up the show with a medley of impersonations, the finale of which was an amazingly convincing impersonation of Mick Jagger of teh Rolling Stones.

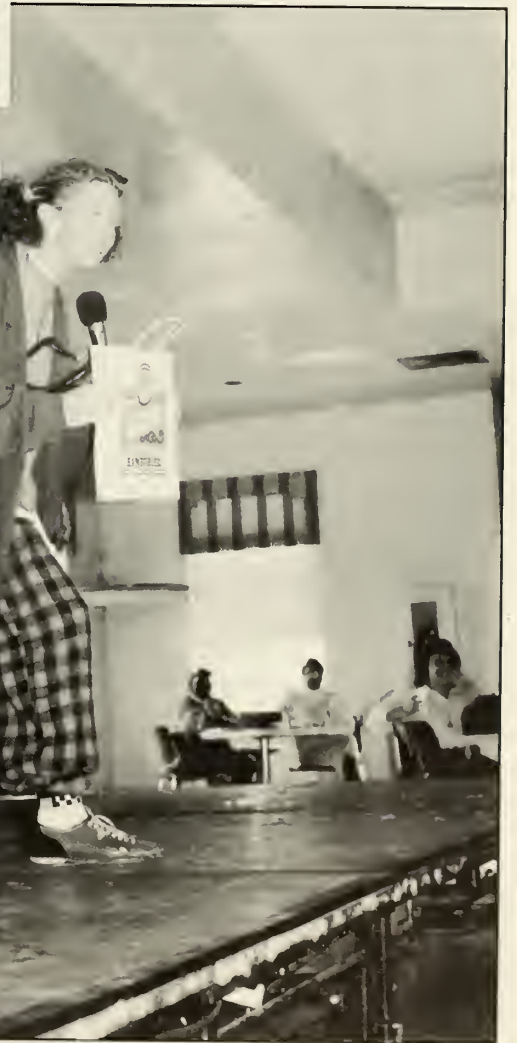

This guy was worth every penny. If he comes back this year, go see him. If you want to bring him back, drop by the Student Activities and tell them so.

Mocktail Party

Yes, we know this event was part of Alcohol Awareness Week, and we already said that didn't happen, but hey, we had two pages reserved for this event early in the year, and it was too late to change it! We simply report things as they happened. Or didn't happen, as the case may be.

(bam, bam, bam)...

After a few good grades, maybe one grade that's not so good (probably in math!), this group represents those who have started to focus on their career goals. They've started to declare majors, and have even taken a few courses outside of Gamble or Hawes Halls.

Almost There!

Finally, after successfully negotiating the blindingly black halls of education which comprised their freshman and sophomore years, these students can see the light at the end of the tunnel. It's a faint light, to be sure, but a light nonetheless. One more year and these vacation years of college, plagued by poverty, will be replaced by the real world and honest work, and its rewards (hopefully).

The Class of 1992

Whether it was for two years, three years, or four years, they've made it. From English 101 up to the 400 level courses, the following pages show the people who had the skill, determination and perserverance to earn their degree. Good luck, and to borrow a phrase from Dennis Miller, "These people are outta' here!"

Dr. Maryellen Cosgrove; Role Model in the Education Department

Dr. Cosgrove is never too busy to take time with

We say again, Dr. Cosgrove is never too busy to

Dr. Cosgrove's high energy method of teaching keeps many students enthused about their futures in education.

take time with a student.

Born and raised in Connecticut, Dr. Cosgrove exudes energy and vitality. Her rapid fire verbal delivery is but one of the signs indicating she has a great deal to say about her field of study and instruction. She is passionate when she speaks of Education and, in particular, the approach to teaching the educational development of a child.

Graduating from the University of Connecticut, Dr. Cosgrove received a B.S. in Elementary Education. She attained a Masters in Elementary Education/Learning Disabilities in just one year while teaching first grade! She then completed her sixth year Professional Certificate in Elementary Education/Gifted and Talented. With a Doctorate as her goal, Dr. Cosgrove was a determined student receiving her Ph.D. in Curriculum and Instruction/Reading Administration which was also from the University of Connecticut.

Prior to accepting a position with Armstrong, Dr. Cosgrove taught in the Connecticut State University system and at American International College in Massachusetts. After her interview with Armstrong, Dr. Cosgrove was impressed with the school, the faculty, and with the "comfortable" feeling. Key in her decision to accepting the position was the cooperation and focus on assistance she found among the faculty. She decided Armstrong was where she wanted to teach. Dr. Cosgrove is an active member of many professional organizations and is the President of the Beaufort County Reading Association. She is devoted to the improvement of reading instruction and the promotion of the lifetime reading habits through her teaching, writing, and presentations.

Balancing a life which includes both family and a career, Dr. Cosgrove sets the standard of devotion for education students to emulate. Her dedication to education goes far beyond mere teaching. She feels strongly, without reading there is no math, science, social studies, or even communication. Her philosophy and goal is to help produce teachers in whom she can entrust the education of the young minds, as well as the education of her own children. Initially impressed with the Armstrong faculty, her efforts and cooperation have made her an invaluable part of Armstrong State College

Dr. Carol Andrews; English Inspiration

By far, the true test of an excellent teacher lies not solely upon his/her knowledge of the subject, but the ability to interest others in the subject. The monumental task of educating and cultivating minds of the future rests in the hands of teachers; and steadfast dedication and belief in one's cause and effect as a teacher is crucial to a professor's success. A true educator can capture their students' attention with wit, knowledge, and enthusiasm, and pass along to them an fired energy to learn and a new desire to seek out more information. More information means more knowledge. Knowledge means power. Power breeds success. All the pieces can fall into place for an upcoming student because they happened into one excellent teacher. Such teachers are rare. Such teachers are indispensable. Dr. Carol Andrews is such a teacher.

Dr. Andrews' field of specialty is Modern American & British Literature (1890 -), and any English Major on campus will tell you she knows what she's talking about when she's talking about literature. But what make her even more valuable is her ability to interest students in literature who are not English Majors. All freshman have to take core English courses, and

“Life is not just TV. You can and should incorporate books into your life, not just in class, but all sorts of ways.”

---

Taking time out in front of the library to field students' questions.

Dr. Andrews discusses her views with Dr. Stone after giving her faculty lecture.

there's always that chance they will luck into Dr. Andrews' class during one of those quarters. Trying to take the mind of someone numbed by the previous night's version of "The Simpsons" and interesting them in Oedipus Rex is no easy task, yet Dr. Andrews often meets with success. Once that interest has been captured, she easily maintains it into upper level courses, offering great insights, and inspiring great insights, into major works ranging from "A Raisin In The Sun" to The Sound and The Fury.

Originally from Macon, Ga., Cheryl Andrews earned her Ph.D. from Vanderbilt. She had stints as a teacher and lecturer at other colleges, but finally ended up here at Armstrong State. People, count your blessings, you're a lucky lot.

Wrapping Up The Book

We'll close the yearbook with a few more shots of students of Armstrong State College doing the things they do.

It was quite a year.

See ya!

Bandemonium

Every year this event gets bigger and bigger. A field of eight of the areas top bands were picked from a record twenty nine entries to compete in this year's contest. After months of preparation and anticipation, it all came down on January 11, 1992. The competition was fierce and heated. Zero Hour played brooms like ZZ Top, Checkpoint Charlie threw a mike stand in the air and missed it on the way down, Leap of Faith calmly played some killer rock, Toxic Oscar gave us the blues, while And Sometimes Why almost rocked the roof off the place. In the end, and to the delight of most of the auditorium, And Sometimes Why won the

Respiratory Therapist, Newlywed Bride, Graduating Student

Two years ago, Stephanie Beaty arrived at Armstrong State College fresh from Jenkins High School and the marriage altar. Despite repeated discouragements from friends who told her trying to balance her new life with college would be too much of a strain, she charged forward with her dream. In June she realized that dream when she graduated as an accredited Respiratory Therapist. Because she's too polite to say, we'll say it for her: "She told you so!"

Her profession requires her to learn the operation of high tech equipment.

How it's done

Soon all of my hard work will pay off. Graduation is not far away and I'm getting more anxious as the days go by. It took a lot of encouragement from my mother because of my own doubts about going to college right away. She showed me that if I waited I would probably end up never going at all. Even though I stayed up late many nights, got up early many mornings, and studied most of the time, I have no regrets. I now see that going to school was the best thing, not only for me, but for my family. By completing my schooling I will be able to afford my family the opportunity to seek the finest education possible. It was worth every difficult, fun, frustrating and rewarding moment.

Halloween Party

The Halloween Party was lots of fun for everyone who came. From the dancing to the costume contest, it was a fun filled activity for all. If you didn't make it, you missed a personal visit with Moses, Death, a Unicorn, a badly wounded war hero, indians, vampires and all kinds of other gruesome apparitions. For winning the best costume contest, Russell Jones (who came as The Grim Reaper) walked away with a brand new portable Boom Box, complete with CD player and CDs! Mark your calendars, they'll be another one next year!

Armstrong Fest

Armstrong Fest is an annual event held by the Alumni Association of Armstrong State College. Each year the event raises money for scholarships by offering fun, games and prizes to little children from all over the area. The activities ranged from dart throwing to riding a Ferris Wheel. A fun time was had by all, including the Armstrong Student Volunteers, who bagged a shirt for their efforts.

It is finished.

But it wouldn't be if not for the help of a good friend by the name of Ben Shores, a busy, bossy guy downstairs by the name of Al Harris, a loving wife, and little girl named Sarah. All of these people contributed in their own way, each equally important.

The true test of a staff member is whether or not he/she can weather the storm and stick with the project from start to finish. Ben stuck by me all the way, while others fell to the side early in the year, or toward the end. He put up with my inflated ego and bad moods, motivated me when I needed it, took pictures, laid out the sports section, did the index, countless other things, and even bought a few lunches. Thanks Ben.

Al Harris is a self confident, tolerant, on-top-of-things, sometimes pushy sort of guy that can get things done. Me too. Most of the time we agreed, occasionally we clashed (usually around deadlines). I owe him thanks for his help. This book could not have happened without him, and neither could many student activities. Thanks Al.

My wife, Kimberly, understood all those times I spent in the yearbook office instead of being at home. She wasn't crazy about it, but she understood. She takes good care of me, she reassures me, she loves me. Thanks Kimmy.

And Sarah, my daughter. Nothing can motivate one more than the total trust, love, and confidence a child puts in a parent. I keep a picture of her next to the computer in my office, and it keeps me going. When I get home, she's always there with a smile on her face as she runs toward me, arms outstretched, ready to be picked up and hugged with a laugh. My hope of a bright future for her is the reason I'm in college. Sometimes I think all this work isn't worth it, then she melts my soul and fires my determination when she tilts her head to the right, looks up at me and says, "Play, daddy?" Thanks Sarah.

And so I'm done. My money is earned, and a book has been created that will be pulled out of some attic ten or twelve years from now and bring back what I hope are good memories. For now, it's time for Ben, Al, Kim, Sarah and I to start it all over again. No bells, no whistles, just satisfaction.
